WIFE AND SE UGHTER KILLED

THE DOUBLE MURDER IN BROOKVILLE. AN AGED AND BLIND PARALYTIC BRUTALLY BEATEN -THE MURDERER AT LARGE.

The town of Oyster Bay, L. I., was greatly excited yesterday over the murder of Mrs. Lydia Maybee and her daughter Annie, at Brookville on Saturday evening by some person at present un-known. Brookville is a hamlet of about one hundred inhabitants situated on the road from Locust Valley to Jericho, and is about four miles from the latter place and the same distance from the village of Oyster Bay. Its surroundings are the most picturesque on the north side of the island. One of the pleasantest homesteads in the place is that of Garret Maybee, a commodious farm-house, portions of which were built in the time of the Revolution. The dwelling is of wood, two stories in height, with a kitchen extension. Of late years the dwelling was remodelled by Garret Maybee, who succeeded his father in its possession some twenty years ago. It stands back from the Brookville road about fifty feet. A lawn dotted with spruce and pine trees, slopes from the house to the road and is surrounded by the farm of about thirty acres. There are eleven rooms in the house. A parlor extends from front to rear, with a wide hall on the first floor, with front and back entrance dividing the parlor from the dining and sitting-room. The kitchen is a small wing off the dining-room on the south side of the house. A flight of stairs, facing the front door, leads to the second story, where are five bed-rooms. Two attics complete the building. The house is supplied with water from a reservoir on a hill near by. About seventy-five feet from the house to the northward stands a small carriage-house surrounded by a picket fence, and at a further distance of about hundred and fifty feet stands the barn with the horse and cow stables, where the crime was committed. The barn is divided into two parts by a gang from the main door, the cattle stalls being on the left of this entrance. There is a small door at the corner of the building which opens into these stalls in the rear. Next to this small door are two closed stalls. Beyond an open stall in which had been stored a mass of leaves to be used as bedding for the animals.

The nearest dwelling to that of Mr. Maybee's is directly across the street on the west side of the road where resides Miss Phebe Weeks, a school teaher in the village. The parsonage occupied by the Rev. J. J. Smock, is about one-eighth of a mile north and the houses of Messrs, Baxter, Tappan, McQueen and Fitting are in the immediate vicinity.

Mr. Maybee, whose age is seventy-three, was for many years engaged in the lumber business in Brooklyn. He retired some years ago. Fifteen years ago he had a paralytic stroke, which deprived him of the use of his lower limbs, and some fourteen months ago he became totally blind. His wife Lydia, who was a few years his senior, and his daughter Annie, (unmarried) age thirty-eight, lived with him. An elder daughter, Mrs. Simonson, lives with her husband some distance from her father. Owing to business reverses Mr. Maybee, who at one time was wealthy, lost the greater part of his fortune. And for some time past Mr. Tappan, one of his neighbors, has done what work has been done on the farm.

A FATAL VISIT TO THE BARN. For a long time past it has been the habit of Mrs. Maybee to go to the barn morning and evening for the purpose of milking, going in the afternoon about half-past 4. As was her custom she went to the barn on Saturday afternoon at half-past 4, to milk and was seen throwing out some of the stable bedding after she reached there. She was gone so long from the house that her husband became querulous as he usually did if she was away from him for any length of time. He complained to his daughter, who became alarmed at last and about 5 o'clock went to the barn herself, taking with her a lighted lantern. She was gone from the house nearly half an hour, when Mr. Maybee heard footsteps in the kitchen. The footsteps were strange to him and he asked "who is there." The answer was "me," given in a low assumed voice, Immediately afterward some person passed through the room where Mr. Maybee was sitting, and going out into the hall, went up stairs, remaining a few minutes. He then returned to the room and demanded the old man's watch. Mr. Maybee then first became aware that it was a man and a stranger that he had heard only a few moments before going up stairs. In reply to the demand for his watch, Mr. Maybee said that he could not get it. "Then I will kill you," said the stranger, and taking one of Mr. Maybee's canes from his hand struck him over the left temple four crashing blows that knocked him senseless. Mr. Maybee at the time was sitting in his easy chair near the window. He thinks that he must have remained unconscious for over fifteen minutes. When he came to himself, he raised the window and shouted "murder."

His feeble cry was heard by Mrs. Weeks. She is positive that it was then a few minutes past 6. As quickly as possible she called William Lamberson, Edward Tappan and others. They went directly across to Maybee's and found him sitting by the window. He asked them to come in as he was badly hurt. Conscious that some calamity had happened he begged them to go to the barn and see where his wife and daughter were. Instead of going into the house or to the barn the party went to W. H. Remsen and told him, and he at once, with a Mr. Smith, who was at his house, returned with them. Upon reaching Maybee's, Smith and Tappan went into the house. After some little hesitation they lighted a lamp in the sitting-room, and to their horror found Mr. Maybee sitting in his chair covered with blood that had flowed from the wounds upon his head. The injured man again begged them to go to the barn and see what had become of his wife and daughter, and being reinforced by a number of others, the party, excepting Smith, went to the barn.

FINDING THE MURDERED WOMEN. The lantern that Miss Maybee took from the house was found burning on the barn floor, and the empty milk pail stood on the feed bin. Search was then made for the two women. The hand of Miss Maybee was first discovered sticking up from under the bedding of leaves in the open stoll. Under a pile of leaves in the stall at the northwest corner of the stable and within two feet of her daughter lay the body of Mrs. Maybee. Both were dead, but the body of Miss Maybee was still warm. Word was at once sent to Coroner Valentine Baylis, at Oyster Bay, who reached the scene of the murder about 9:30 o'clock and immediately im panelled a jury as follows: John L. Bogert, Edward Mehan, Andrew J. Remsen, Henry Rushmore, Edward Somers, Morris Simonson and Nicholas Van Cott. The jury after viewing the bodies were discharged until this morning when the inquest will be held. DISCLOSURES OF THE AUTOPSY. Yesterday morning Drs. Whitney Frye, Bogert and Watson, made a post-mortem examination of the murdered women which showed that they had died of strangulation. What the autopsy revealed was described as follows by Dr. Watson to a TRIB-UNE reporter :

"The autopsy showed nothing save a confirmation of the external examinations. These proved clearly that the two women died from strangulation. There was the clear imprint of a thumb, about the size of a nicker. The face and head showed evidence of venous congestion. No other bruise or marks were found. The expression of the face was normal. Upon the right side of the neck of the daughter was an abrasion caused by the pressure of a thumb, and on the left side of the neck was an abrasion caused by the pressure of three fingers wide apart. There was also an abrasion on the right temple. It was obtains from a brother among the Apache Indians, an account of the death of "Charlie" McComas. The brother NEW-YORK, MONDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1883.

PENDLETON'S FRIENDS AWAKENING-PAYNE STURDI-LY OPPOSED.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.] CLEVELAND, Nov. 18 .- The workers for Payne are not as confident as they were. David R Paige, who is looked upon as Payne's manager, returned last night from New-York, where he has been holding an interview with Tilden. The resuit of his visit to Gramercy Park is not known. Ellitor Horen of The Dayton Democrat, talks about the Senatorship as follows:

"I believe the people, the thinking Democrats of the party, favor the election of General Ward to the Senate; representatives will undoubtedly vote for him Should they do otherwise, I am convinced that they would ot represent their constituents. I speak of the sentiment which prevails in the greater portion of Southern Ohio. Take the State at large. It is my belief that the better men of the party. those that have endured the taunts and flings of Republicans when it took nerve to be a Demorerat, those that have been the mainstay of the party, are awakening; they are now asking what has Mr. Pendleton done to deserve the abuse that is now being heaped upon him by a band of aliesed Democrats and ward politicians. What crime has he committed that the time homored custom of civing a Senator two terms should now be abandoned? I am aware that Mr. Payne is a candidate. He is an old Democrat, such as the party honored thirty years ago. The war came on; and during that struggle Mr. Payne turned a cold shoulder to those who kept the Democratic house open. After the war he went to Congress, Yet since that time a strangness has grown up, and he is not recognized as belonging to the old household. The people, the reliable men who prevented the very disbundment of Mr. Pendleton without cause. Fairness and common honesty would give him smaler term; and while I may personally favor General Ward, I recognize the fact that Mr. Pendleton is entitled to a second term. those that have endured the taunts and flings

CLAIMS AND COUNTER CLAIMS-RUMORS OF COM-BINATIONS.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.] Washington, Nov. 18,-" No dark horse will win this race," said Colonel Morrison, of Illinois, this afternoon, and he spoke with the air of a man who neant what he said. Of course, he is not ignorant of the fact that some members of the House urge him as a promising "dark horse" for the Speakership race, but he betrays no symptoms of a desire to enter it. His conversation with a TRIB-UNE correspondent to-day left the impression that, while he may east a complimentary vote for Mr Springer, he thinks the candidacy of that gentleman is not a serious or formulable one, and that as oon as it falls by the way, he will exert all his nfluence for Mr Carlisle.

He does not believe the November elections have strengthened Mr. Randall's pospects. "The busiss interests of the country which oppose a new agitation of the tariff question, were for Mr. Randall before the elections, just as earnestly as the are now, and I do not think the result in New-York will affect a single vote," said Colonel Morrison. Neither does he believe that the attempts to show that Mr. Carlisle is inimical to appropriations to carry out the plans of the Mississippi River Commission will cost him any votes among Repreentatives from States which border on the lower Mississippi, "The men who oppose Carlisle on that said he, " are the men who want to find some fair excuse to support Randall," Colonel Morrison thinks that the record of Mr. Carlisle on the subject of internal improvements will be found not to differ materially from that made by Mr. Randali or bimself.

APPEARANCE OF MR. BANDALL.

Mr. Randall put in an appearance at several of the hotels this evening. His air of confidence, coupled with freedom from anything like boasting respecting his "claims" to support, have perceptsome who are working for other candidates. Perry Belinout was among the first to meet Mr. Randall at Willard's and the greeting be extended to the Pennsylvania candidate is described as effusive. Mr. Belmont is put down, however, as for Mr. Cox first and Mr. Carlisle second. He will return to New-York immediately, and it is said that Abram S. Hewitt, who was expected to arrive tomorrow to assist Mr. Cox in his cauvass, has sent word that the condition of his health forbids his coming at present. Mr. Cox expects other friends

Congression Ermentrout, of Pennsylvania, who is expected to-morrow, will have charge of Mr. Randall's headquarters at the Ebbitt House, and Mr. Randall will occupy the rooms at the National iducted his canvass for the Speakership. His friends now claim that he will receive votes from very Southern State except Kentucky, and from very Western State except Nevada, and possibly Illinois. For weeks the friends of Mr. Carlisi have confidently claimed two of the three votes from West Virginia. The friends of Mr. Randall now assert with equal confidence that he will re-ceive two if not three votes from that State.

freely discussed and it is intimated that chairmanships and committee appointments have been as carnestly sought and as freely promised as in any former contest. "Your 'pup' story will bear anther application," said a showd Pemocrat to-day. " If I am not much mistaken at least two of the candidates, possibly all of them, have already premised mere places than they will have to be-stow, if they are elected." it is probable, however, that most of the provises thus far are about as vague and indefinite as a good many of the "piedges" for votes obtained by and in behalf of the candidates. Of the thirty-one Democratic Representatives who have arrived four are candidates and probably at least two-thirds of the other expect to receive substantial "recognition" in the parties of commutes amountments. The failure of

WHAT TROUBLES MR. COX.

Mr. Cox is said to be somewhat troubled by the republication of some remarks made by him in the last Congress in favor of the abolition of the mternal revenue system. One of his friends explains that Mr. Cox is in favor of keeping the taxes on whiskey and tobacco, but is opposed to the present system of collecting them. To this explanation some of his opponents demur, declaring it to be equivalent to saying that he favors the taxes, but is opposed to their collection. Despite the fact that fewer than one-sixth of the men whose votes that lower than one-sixth of the men whose votes will decide the Speakership struggle have arrived in Washington, the betting men have begun to offer wagers on the result. A friend of Mr. Carlisle received a letter from a man in New-York several days ago, saying that a "book-maker" had offered to bet with him. $2,000 to $500-that Mr. Randall will be elected and asking his advice. The inquirer received a favorable reply respecting the prospects of Mr. Carlisle and, it is said, the waser was accented.

THE UNITED STATES SENATE.

SPECULATION ABOUT . IIS REORGANIZATION-MR GORHAM.
[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.]

Washington, Nov. 18 .- While the Speakership is the main topic of public discussion in Washington and is likely to overshadow other questions for two weeks, another matter is receiving quiet attention Will the Senate be reorganized?" is a question in which a few men are deeply interested, and for months some of have been earnestly engaged in trying to find ar affirmative answer to it. Perhaps the man who feels the anismative answer to it. Pernaps the man who teem the livellest interest in such an answer is George C. Gorham, formerly Secretary of the Senate, who received the caucus nomination for that office when the Republicans, aided by Senate Mahone, attempted to fill the Senate offices two years ago. If either of the Virginia Senators should vote with the Republicans this winter, they would be able to do what they failed to accomplish in would be able to do what they failed to accomplish i 1881, but there seems to be some feeling of uncertainty

Mr. Gorham's friends assert that if he should be again nominated, Senator Mahone would vote with the Republicans on the question of reorganization—otherwise not. They also assert that Mr. Gorham can secure the caucus nation, but that does not seem quite probable. California Republican recently said: "Gorham is I regarded as a good Republican in California now, and I do not see how Senator Miller could afford to support his pretensions or vote for him in the caucus. His pron would be regarded with general dislayor by the Repre-would be regarded with general distance by the Representatives of California.

His share, as an editor, in the controversy which led to the overthrow of Bossism in New-York and Pennsylvania has not been forgotten and, it may prove a greater weight than he can carry, in case he again enters the race for the honor which, it is understood, he covets. More than one Senator who voted for him two years ago has been heard to declare that he would be placed in a very embarrassing situation, "if the Republicans should attempt to reorganize the Senate on any pian which should include Mr. Gorham as a candidate.

There is reason to believe it has more than once been suggested to the President that he might relieve, not only the Republican Senators, but his administration also, from embarrassment by giving Mr. Gorham an appointment at a distance from Washington. To this, it is said, the answer has been that the President coul not afford to confer office upon Mr. Gorham, not because he might fail to perform his duties well, but on account of the general disfavor, not to say indignation, with which his appointment would be received by Republicans generally, widerstood that there will be a conference of Re-

It is understood that there will be a conference of Republican Senators, next week to take into consideration and decide upon the proper course to pursue in regard to a reorganization of the Senate.

Years elapsed, and Mrs. Cun-ningham supposed he had been killed in the war. She came to Chicago and began keeping a boarding-house. Upon arriving at Schooleraft, she learned that Cunning-ham had lived in the place twenty years and had amassed from $8,000 to $10,000, which he had willed to John H. Dix and T. J. Underwood. She had the body exhumed and recognized the remains as those of her husband. She gave notice that she would contest the will fully.

VIEWS OF MAYOR EDSON.

THE LATE ELECTION-GOVERNMENT OF CITIES-CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 18.-In an interview with Mayor Edson, obtained while he was visiting this city with General Grant and party, and to be published in The Post Express to-morrow, he is reported as saying: "I regard the recent election in New-York State as substantially a Republican victory, brought about through dissension in the Democratic ranks and by possibly unwise nominations. The great victory of the year before contributed largely to the defeat by causing too great confidence on the part of the Democrats; but still I think the Democratic chances for the Presidential campaign quite as good as if the election had gone the other way. In fact the reverse of this year should unite the Democracy and teach them to make judicious nominations next year. Of course, I undersubdidence the Democracy and teach them to make judicious nominations next year. Of course, I understand that the Republican party, if wise in its legislative action this year, will be in an excellent position before the people; but, if the legislative power be used unwisely, the Democrats, who have not the power to make legislative errors, will be able to profit largely by the blumders of their opponents.

"I do not know that the Republicans have any plan of legislative work laid out for the winter. Probably they have not. In my view the Government of cities is rapidly becoming a serious question. The State of New-York has done very well in giving Brooklyn so excellent a charter. New-York City asked this of the Legislature last year, but falled to get it. I haven't changed my mind at all in respect to the legislation needed. It is now only a question as to whether the Republicans will be farsighted enough to grant the request, which will certainly be repeated the coming winter. The charter of Brooklyn gives the Mayor some powers which he has not before enjoyed, and which he ought to have. In saying this i do not mean to be understood as hankering personally for increased power; but in the future the people of the City of New-York should select a man in whom they have confidence and then he should have fully as comprehensive powers as those granted the executive of Brooklyn. This rule should apply to all cities of over 100,000 inhab-

A LUNATIC BOILED TO DEATH.

A SERIOUS CASE OF NEGLECT REPORTED AT THE [BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.]

CLEVELAND, Nov. 18 .- A dispatch from Dayton reports that numerous outrages have occurred at the asylum for the insane. Some time about the first of the year a colored patient was scalded of the bath-tubs so badly that he died the next morning. This was kept secret by the officials and employes of the institution until yesterday. The attendant in whose care the patient then was has left the institution, but was found. His name is William M. Stickney, and he is now engaged in the music busines in the city. He refused to speak at first, and expressed fears, for the onsequences, but finally corroborated in every instance the facts gathered from other employes of the institution,

Stickney said he had taken the patient into the bathroom, and, after bathing him, had gone into another spariment for his clothes. When he returned the patient was lying in the bath tub half covered with boiling hot water; in his absence it had somehow been turned on. He lifted the man out of the tub and the cooked fiesh stuck to his fingers. He was assisted to his apartment and Stickney himself reported to Dr. Tobey, the superintendent of the institution, at six o'clock, the scalding having occurred just before. Two hours elapsed and, no physician coming to the patient, he reported at 8 o'clock that the man was badly burned and needed medical attention. No physician came to see him until noon the next day, when Dr. Tobey himself attended the injured man. About two hours later he died. Stickney says he has no idea how the water was turned on. There are several rumors which will be investigated.

The remains were in a wonderful state of preservation, although the skull and limbs were detached and scat-

The belief is expressed that the cave is close to the sliver mines which are said to exist in the mountain and which were worked by the Spaniards many years since and afterward closed so effectually that no trace of them has ever been found. ## PRICE THREE CENTS. INCREASED CITY EXPENSES.

PRESIDENT ASTEN'S OPPOSITION.

WHY THE OTHER MEMBERS OF THE BOARD OF ESTIMATE FAVOR LARGER APPROPRIATIONS.

The Aldermen will meet this week to consider the provisional estimates prepared by the Board of Apportionment and will follow their usual practice of recommending increased appropriations for those departments in which they as politicians have the greatest interest. Then the Board of Apportionment will proceed to make final estimates. In previous years the recommendations of the Aldermen have had no weight. They have always been extravagant and the Board of Estimate has laid them on the table. This year, however, it is expected that a different course will be followed and it is likely to lead to a new trouble. It is well known that Mayor Edson believes that the Aldermen represent a majority of the voters of the city and that it is his duty, therefore, to keep in harmony with them. Hence it is thought that the expressed will of the Aldermen in regard to appropriations will be heeded by the Mayor. Controller Grant's term will expire next year, when he hopes to come before the Aldermen for confirmation for a full term. He is not likely to oppose their wishes and in all his actions as Controller he has been a faithful representative of the Mayor. John Reilly will of course favor large appropriations for every purpose, as heretofore. This will leave President Asten alone in his contest for decreased expenditures. But the law has put in his hands a power which he can use to great effect.

LEAVING THE CITY WITHOUT APPROPRIATIONS. The City Consolidation Act requires an affirmative vote of all the members of the Board of Estimate in making the provisional estimates. It does not state that the same concurrent vote is required in making the final estimates; but practically the same provision is reaffirmed by requiring the members to sign the final estimates before the sums appropriated can be used by the departments. There has never been a time when a member has refused to sign the final estimates, because to avoid the trouble such a course might cause, the Board has generally agreed upon appropriations that would be satisfactory to all the members. The attempt, however, to increase the city's expenses next year will meet with stubborn opposition from President Asten. He says that he will not sign the final estimates unless the provisional estimates are largely reduced. In order to secure that result, the recommendations of the Aldermen will have to be disregarded. And there is a general belief about the City Hall that the majority in the Board of Estimate will not only refuse to disregard the wishes of the Aldermen, but will resist the attempt to cut off a million dollars from the provisional estimates. If that proves to be the case, President Asten says that there will be no final estimates.

dent Asten says that there will be no final estimates.

Alderman Reilly has accused Mr. Asten of seeking notoriety and has endeavored in other ways to force him to desist from his efforts for economy. Various influences have been brought to bear in order to get him to withdraw his opposition to the practice of increasing appropriations by making transfers of unexpended balances; but so far without avail. If Mr. Asten refuses to sign the final estimates, the city will have to go to the Legislature in order to get money to pay the expenses of running the manicipality in 1884. In that event, the Republicans could pass any law applicable to the subject they chose, which would be approved by the Governor, and the city expenses could by that means be cut down two or three million dollars.

The EXTRAVAGANT CLAIMS OF THE DEPARTMENTS, President Asten said on Saturday that he hoped

President Asten said on Saturday that he hoped the necessity for extreme measures would be avoided, but he would not consent to such a large increase of the tax rate as would be necessary if the sums appropriated in the provisional estimates were adhered to in the final estimates.

Some of the items in the estimates submitted by the departments are regarded as peculiar. The Controller, for instance, was allowed in the provisional estimates an increase of $30,000 for clerk sional estimates an increase of $30,000 for clerk hire for next year over the amount asked by Con-troller Campbell for the present year. The Con-troller also asked for and was allowed in the pro-visional estimates $26,000 for cleaning the mar-kets in 1884. In 1881 Controller Campbell did the same work for $22,317 and last year it only cost the city $18,442. For nine months of the present year the cost of cleaning the markets has present year the cost of cleaning the markets has been $16,124, or at the rate of $21,498 for the year. There are two new market buildings now and ex-Controller Campbell said that it would cost less to clean them than it cost to clean the old buildings; yet Controller Grant wants $8,000 more with which to clean the new market buildings in 1884 than it cost the city to clean the old buildings in 1882. These are samples of the way in which the appropriations are increased in nearly all the departments.

A DRUG STORE RAZED BY A MOB.

ROMNEY, Ind., Nov. 18 .- A large crowd, all wearing masks, and several dressed in woman's clothes, went to the drug store of C. C. Sutton, shortly before midnight, and after stationing armed guards, proceeded to demolish bottles, barrels, casks and drugs. Then, with axes and battering-rams, they knocked off the plastering, sawed and chopped off the studding and plastering, sawed and chopped off the studding and razed the building to the ground. The people declare that Sutton has been selling liquor indiscriminately, and Hayes, a man who recently committed a brutal assault upon a nine year oid girl, claims that he was drunk at the time on whiskey obtained from Sutton's drug store. Sutton has been fined heavily for four violations of the liquor law, and at the preliminary examination of Hayes town's people made a proposition to buy all his liquor and destroy what they regarded as a cancer in the village. Sutton will prosecute those who destroyed his property.

by a blow but by a fall. The right hand was much congested-veneus congestion obviously-and the hypothesis has been made that the murderer caught this hand with his left while choking her with his right. It is probable that the hands of the man, and possibly his face, were marked by her; but a careful search beneath the nails of both hands, and no substances were found."

THEORIES ABOUT THE MURDER. The Board of Town Officers were at the house yesterday and passed a resolution offering $500 for the arrest of the murderers. The Queens County Board of Supervisors at their meeting to be held on Tuesday will be asked to increase the offer $500. The opinion of the people in the neighborhood is that the murderer was acquainted with the house and with the habits of the occupants; and that there is little doubt that he was concealed in the barn when Mrs. Maybee went there. Knowing that he would be caught if he attempted to leave the barn, he waited until the daughter came out, and killed her. Suspicion generally rests upon a tramp who has been seen in the neighborhood for some time past. It is said that he has been in the habit of visiting the neighborhood at times for the past four or five years. Friday night he slept in the Poorhouse, which is only a quarter of a mile from the scene of the murder. He was seen in the neighborhood on Saturday afternoon and late in the evening on the turnpike, near Roslyn, going West. It is said that shortly before the time of the murder he stopped at a house in the village and was given a cup of coffee. He is described as a man about five feet six inches in height, rather stout, age about thirty-five years, with short grizzly beard. He were a long dark overcoat. District-Attorney Fleming was early at the scene of the murder, and gave directions to the officers and the Coroner, and was present again yesterday. The murderer secured in the house two open-faced gold watches and about $100 in money. The fact was observed by the District Attorney that but two of the drawers in the bureau from which the valuables were taken were disturbed.

District Attorney Fleming, and Deputy Sheriff

Edward Masterson, drove from Jamaica to Brook-ville and Oyster Bay, early yesterday morning, to the scene of tragedy. A TRIECNE reporter saw Mr. Mas-terson at Jamaica, last night on his return. He said, "It does not seem probable that the man whose de-scription was sent out is the guilty man. The crime was probably committed by some one familiar "It does not seem probable that the man whose description was sent out is the guilty man. The crime was probably committed by some one familiar with the house and with the habits of the family; at least I think so from the fact that the man, whoever he was, went up stairs when he first came in the house. A lamp, which it is supposed was kept in a closet on the upper floor, was taken out and lighted, and was still burning when the neighbors came in. A drawer had been opened, and the mofrey and a gold watch taken out, but nothing else in the room was disturbed. On coming down stairs he demand the old man's watch, although he had already got one. How should he know that there was another watch in the house unless he was acquainted there? I do not believe the murderer went to Brooklyn at all, but that he will be found further up the Island." Mr. Masterson said he found a large number of farmers and villagers from many miles around, who had driven over to the scene of the tragedy. Great interest was manifested in every item of news or opinion about it, and groups gathered quickly about when two or three men began to talk together about it.

MR. REMSEN'S STORY.

MR. REMSEN'S STORY. W. H. Remsen, who was one of the first to enter the house, thus describes what he heard and saw: "Ed. Tappan told me about 6:30 that he thought there had been murder and robbery at Mr. Maybee's and I went there at once. I entered the house by the back hall door and went into the sitting-room, where I saw a horrible sight, poor old blind Ganet Maybee was lying back in his chair unconscious, streams of blood flowing from on his head, wounds face and down upon his clothes. He rallied in a few minutes and cried out 'I am murdered and had come into the room through the kitchen and passed through to the hall, ascended the stairs to the room above his bedroom. He said that the man in a few minutes came down and said: known actor on the variety stage, descried her last Monthe man in a few minutes came down and said:

Baltimore; so she followed him. The last of her money answered that he had no watch. The man, after feeling in Mr. Maybee's pockets, took a thick stick from the helpless invalid and struck him four hard blows on the head. I started to go and find Mrs. Maybee and Annie, when the old gentleman piteously cried for me not to leave him; but, asking Ezra Baxter to remain, I proceeded quickly to the barn. By this time over a hundred persons had congregated around the house and many of them accompanied me. Not seeing anything of either Mrs. or Annie Maybee, and noticing the lighted lamp and milk pail on the floor, I began to search the place. As I was climbing to the hay-mow, I noticed a hand sticking up in an empty cow-stall, and descending quickly found, covered over with bedding leaves, the bodies of my neighbor's wife and daughter. That of Mrs. Maybee was cold, but Annie's body was still warm. There was after feeling in Mr. Maybee's pockets, took a thick

The wanderings of the suspected murderer are partly described by a number of people. He asked for and got breakfast at the home of ex-Assembly, man Townsend D. Cock, at Locust Valley-on Tuesday morning. November 13. Kobert Herzog saw him en the road leading to Locust Valley about 6 o clock Wednesday night, when he crossed over out of the way. Jacob Fitting saw a man like the suspected person, on Friday evening on the Locust Valley road. Andrew J. Bogert saw him about 6 p. m., Friday, on the tumpike, going west. Henry Rushmore says the man asked for breakfast at his house about 7:45 a. m. Saturday, and because he could not get fresh coffee made for him, raised a row. Ezra Bogart saw him about 6 p. m. Saturday, going west, but did not then know of the marder. William Lamberson saw such a man at about 8 p. m. Saturday, having previously seen him in the afternoon. John Hall, the toll-gate keeper on the Roslyn road, saw him pass the toll-gate at a little after 8. This is the last reliable information obtained about the mysterious stranger.

Inspector Thorne received a dispatch from the authorities at Jamaica, L. L. late last night, in which he was informed of the murder and of the offer of $500 as a reward for the arrest and conviction of the guilty persons. The dispatch further gave him to understand that the criminals had fled to this city. Several of Inspector Byrnes' detectives were detailed to search for them.

for them. DETECTIVES AT WORK IN BROOKLYN. No clew was found yesterday in Brooklyn in re gard to the murder, although it was reported that one of the passengers on the last train on Saturday right on the Long Island Railroad answered to his lescription. This man boarded the train at Westbury, and said to a fellow-passenger that he lived in Troy-ave., Brooklyn. He was regarded with suspicion by the train hands, who had heard of the murder, and they watched him closely when he reached the Brooklyn depot. As he jumped off before the train came to a standstill, Conductor Mott and two of the bassengers followed him.. Seeing that he was pursued he ran up Atlantic-ave., and gaining on his pursuers turned into Grand-ave, and was lost to sight. The train starter at the Flatbush Avenue station, who had a good view of the man, said yesterday that he did not correspond to the description as published of the suspenmerderer, for the man who left the train at

Some of the Brooklyn police officials scouted the idea that the murderer came to Brooklyn, and thought it much more likely that the crime was committed by one of the brutal negroes, who live in huts or caves in the interior of Long Island.

Police Superintendent Campbell in Brooklyn, sent word to all the pawnshops in that city to detain any person offering the stolen articles. The announcement that the Queen's County authorities offered $500 reward for the arrest of the murderer stirred the Brooklyn detectives to renewed activity last evening but without definite result. Conductor Mott, of the train on which the suspected man went to Brooklyn, was blamed for not sending a dispatch from Jamaica to Brooklyn, warning the a dispatch from Jamaica to Brooklyn, warning the
